Feedback Digest for MARK JACKSON-STOPS

Mediation Style and Approach

Mark Jackson-Stops is known for his ability to build relationships of trust speedily and he can adapt his approach to the needs of different parties. His style is responsive and flexible and ranges from the lightest of touch to a firm and directive approach when required. Both styles can be seamlessly employed in different rooms at different times on the same day.

Mark spent over 20 years practising as a Chartered Surveyor and managing a surveying practice. In 1994 he turned his negotiating skills towards acting as a neutral in assisting others to settle disputes early, speedily and cost-effectively. His chosen profession could easily have been in the law, as he revels in the cut and thrust of legal argument that is a necessary part of helping parties to analyse risk and find solutions that meet their interests. He is more than capable of challenging appropriately where legal argument appears not to stand up to careful scrutiny.

Mark founded In Place of Strife in 1995 as a mediation service provider and was one of the first mediators in the UK to become full time in the profession.

Legal 500

Mark Jackson-Stops is recognised in Legal 500, where his entry in the 2010 edition reads as follows:

'Exceptionally capable and learned', Mark Jackson-Stops of In Place of Strife rises to the top tier this year, having won the confidence of the legal profession who normally prefer their own. In doing so he has consistently demonstrated 'the ability to get on top of a large amount of complicated paper-work' and to 'grasp the legal and commercial issues underlying disputes'. He has 'no difficulty in imposing his authority and personality on a large group of senior people, and he has a very informal and inclusive style of dealing with different groups'; 'inventive and persistent in devising strategies', he continues to impress.

The Mediation Chambers

In the 2011 edition, his entry reads as follows:

Mark Jackson-Stops is a prolific and experienced mediator whom clients admire for his 'commercial nous', and 'flair for seeing the deal early'. He is described as 'sharp', 'astute', 'imaginative', and possessed of a 'great manner'. While 'courteous' and 'polite', he 'bears his teeth from time to time'.

Chambers Guide to the Legal Profession

He has regularly appeared as a Leader amongst Mediators in Chambers Guide to the Legal Profession.

In the 2010 edition, he appeared in Band 1 with the following researcher commentary:

Jackson-Stops is "one of the few non-lawyers that has genuinely risen to the top in terms of excellence."

Although his practice is a mix of commercial disputes, his background as a chartered surveyor means that his expertise in property development and related professional negligence is particularly sought after. Many clients favour his facilitative style, with others noting his "remarkable inventiveness in finding different ways to approach settlement between disparate parties." Peers also have no hesitation in recommending him: "He is an absolute standout mediator."

Feedback

After a recent multi-party case of great complexity, one of the solicitors wrote:

"Mark reminded me why it is that I, and several colleagues, regard him as the best mediator in the country. Great empathy with the clients, great shuttle diplomat. Sensitive to and focussed on the key issues."

Another wrote:

"All parties are in your debt. It is both a pleasure and a privilege to work with a professional of your calibre."

Yet another wrote:

"Mark is, without doubt, the most effective mediator I have ever used. He is, when available, my first choice mediator"

Themes emerging from the feedback
